Violence at University pilot project – Full Questionnaire

The aim of this pilot study was to investigate the feasibility of measuring violence, in all of its forms, both within and beyond University Campuses. It was not a prevalence study, it was to test whether such a tool could be developed and potential prevalence work could be carried out. The core goals were to assess if:

- a) It is feasible to do this work
- b) It helps to continue the sector wide Universities UK Changing the Culture Initiative and support the development of strategies at institutional level
- c) It identifies any gaps with regard to tackling violence on campus

The ultimate aim is to feed into a bigger, collaborative research project which is sector led and that the methods are robust and can be used on a national level. The research team pledged that the initial pilot questionnaire would be available for other HEI's to use to measure Violence on their campuses and that is what this appendix to the report contains. All we would ask for is results to be fed back to us, including whether the questionnaire was useful.

Many thanks, the research team

Pre Survey

Welcome to the Violence at University research project

This survey investigates students' experiences of violence and victimisation while studying at a UK university. The aims of this research are to:

- Shine a light on students' lived experiences
- Highlight the scale and nature of the violence students encounter
- Develop evidence-led improvements to university policies and support.

What questions will be asked?

You will be asked some questions about your identity, plus any experiences you may have had of violence or victimisation - from everyday inappropriate conduct to criminal offences. Participation is voluntary. You can include as much or as little information as you want and skip questions you do not want to answer. All your responses will be anonymous, so we won't be able to identify you.

We understand that being asked to recall these experiences can be difficult. A list of sources of support available is provided should you wish to talk to someone about anything raised in this survey.

What will happen to my answers?

Responses will be collected as you go - so be aware that clicking 'Next' will submit your answers. Results will be used to inform future research projects, including larger-scale surveys of a similar nature. Results may also be shared in the form of reports, publications or presentations to inform other work in this area. You can visit our web pages to view the results once analysis is complete.

How long will the survey take?

The survey is estimated to take between 15 - 20 minutes to complete.

Who can take part?

Any students currently enrolled at a UK university (and aged 18 or over) can take part.

Who is conducting the research?

The research is being conducted by City, University of London, with collaboration from the University of Surrey, De Montford, Universities UK and Nat Cen. For more information, contact: Carrie.Myers.1@city.ac.uk or Holly.Powell-Jones@city.ac.uk.

Thank you for taking part.

Your contribution is invaluable to raising awareness of students' experiences of violence and helps us advocate for a safer and more supportive university environment.

- Add more detail / comments (optional):

There are many reasons why we might be put off from sharing our experiences openly or reporting them to others.

Please tick all / ANY that you feel apply to you, and give more detail if you can:

- Emotional reasons (e.g. Emotional reasons could mean feeling embarrassed, ashamed, scared, upset, traumatised; or perhaps not wanting to re-live your experience, or have to think about it again). Add more detail:

- Practical reasons (e.g. Practical reasons could mean not knowing how to report or who to talk to; perhaps not wanting to escalate things to police or other authorities; not having the time or not wanting the hassle of going through the processes involved in reporting). Add more detail:

- Social reasons (e.g. Social reasons could mean not wanting other people to know about your experiences, or treat you differently; or fear of 'causing a fuss' or causing friends and family to worry; fear about making things awkward socially, or any other social impacts you might be concerned about). Add more detail:

- Trust reasons (e.g. Trust reasons could mean thinking you may not be believed; perhaps concern there wasn't any 'proof'; not trusting that the information would be kept confidential; or perhaps feeling like no action would be taken at all, or it wouldn't result in any positive outcomes).

Add more detail:

- Perpetrator reasons (e.g. Perpetrator reasons could mean that you were worried about the perpetrator finding out if you reported something; perhaps concern that the perpetrator was someone known to you, or close to you, or that they were someone with more power or authority than you; it may also be fear that people could side with the perpetrator, or the consequences would be worse for you than them). Add more detail:

- Personal reasons (e.g. Personal reasons could mean that you made a personal decision that it wasn't right for you to report it; perhaps you didn't feel it was 'serious' enough or important to report; you may not feel like you wanted or needed any help, or didn't feel 'badly affected' enough; or simply because you just didn't want to). Add more detail:

- Other reasons - add more detail (optional)

- I don't know / I'm not sure
- Prefer not to say
